SLANDERED.

Speaking of mosquitoes, we people at Navasota do not know when we are doing well. The writer had occasion to go to Marlin yesterday, returning last night. Between Marlin and Bremond there is a considerable stretch of bottom and the mosquitoes swarmed into the running train like flies around a bowl of sweetened water. Also, at Marlin, it was next to impossible to sit on the lawn in front of the Malesic Hotel on account of the pests and the hotel lobby was about as bad. We were told that about the same state of affairs exists at Bryan, Calvert and Hearne and on the south of us it is worse, if anything. We may expect to have mosquitoes as long as the bottoms contain any of the overflow water and they will be blown in on every breeze. —Navasota Examiner.

We know the above, in so far as Bryan is concerned, was a lapsus penna on the part of our old friend Blackshear. We cannot believe he would intentionally do our fair little city an injustice. And to say that a town is infested with mosquitoes to the extent so glowingly described above, when not true, would be a great injury. War and pestilence, or even death by the sword, would be far preferable to the lingering torture and torment that can be inflicted by a horde of hungry mosquitoes.

Our friend heard the report, of course, and without considering the matter of its truthfulness, or why there should be mosquitoes at Bryan, what would cause them, etc., put it in his paper. The fact is Bryan is almost free of the pest. There is no reason for mosquitoes in Bryan. There are no sloughs nor lagoons near here. It is ten miles west to the Brazos and thirteen miles east to the Navasota. Bryan is situated on the high dividing ridge midway between the two rivers, and is almost free of contributing influences favorable to the stegomyia facia. The city is high and dry, sun-kissed and wind-swept. Little children play on the shady, velvety lawns and the birds carol sweetly from shady boughs. The breezes are redolent with the perfume of magnolia and jessamine, and the hymns of the morning stars are blended with the vesper of evening. The hum and whir of business make of the days a grand de deum, and the soft falling dew convert the nights into benedictions.

Come on up to Bryan, Ed, cool off and get a good night's sleep—"nature's sweet restorer that knits up the raveled sleeve of care."

THE UNIVERSITY AND A. & M. GRADUATES.

Some time ago we commented on the fact that every member of the graduating class in the school of agriculture at the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College had been offered a position at salaries running from $90 to $150 a month.

Tuesday morning diplomas were presented to two hundred and fifty-five graduates of the University of Texas and yet there has been no indication that positions or even "jobs"—the idea of offering a graduate of a university a "job!"—have been offered to any one of the two hundred and fifty odd.

Why this discrimination in favor of the low fellows who don't know anything much but how to feed hogs, when to call the cows home, the proper fertilizers to use on different soils, the proper rotation of crops and other vulgar subjects scarcely tolerated in university circles where the man who can't recite Keats' Last Sonnet is regarded as an unlettered hound?

Is it possible that the uneducated practical old world turns to the man with ideas of practical value, rather than to him who can tell you the precise mood difference between Milton's L'Allegro and his Il Penseroso?

Does it look with less favor on the man who knows why Ulysses stopped ploughing than on the man who knows the difference between deep and shallow turning of the soil?

What's the matter with these university graduates?

Is there more demand for the graduate who can extract substance and subsistence from the reluctant soil than for the man who knows how to extract the cube root?

Is there less demand for the graduate who knows what Macaulay thought of Charles I than for the man who knows the value of the silo?

Every graduate in the school of agriculture is as eagerly sought after as the only man at a summer resort filled with those of the fair sex.

Two hundred and fifty-five graduates of the university and no man to say, "Well, come down Monday morning and sweep out the store."

What's the matter with this higher education? What shall it profit a man to lay up classic treasures for his soul if his stomach starves? —Dallas Times-Herald.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ORGANIZED.

Oak Grove Mission Sunday School Organized With Large Membership.

In accordance with plans formed several months ago, a Sunday school was organized at 3:30 yesterday afternoon at Oak Grove Park school house under the auspices of the First Baptist Church. The church has had its plans matured for some time, but deferred action until the building was formally turned over by the builders and accepted by the city school board. This action was taken a few days ago and permission was secured from the board at once to use the building for this purpose.

In answer to the published announcement and the announcement made at the church at the Sunday morning service, a large number of the members of the church and Sunday school were present at the appointed hour to take part in the organization.

Superintendent John A. Moore presided during the organization and E. J. Fountain Jr. acted as secretary. Organization was perfected by the election of J. G. Minkert, superintendent; E. J. Fountain Jr., assistant superintendent; E. F. Parks, secretary and treasurer; Miss Annie Belle Batts, organist, and H. O. Boatwright and Mrs. A. M. Rhodes, teachers. Both teachers have had long years' experience and no better are to be found in all the State.

A large number of the children of that part of the city were present and the organization enrollment numbered twenty-seven.

The meeting hour will be 4 o'clock each Sunday afternoon and by next Sunday an organ will be provided and some good music will be a feature.

The Oak Grove Mission Sunday school is the first organization of the kind in Bryan outside the regular churches, and this newest of the city's Christian activities starts "but under most favorable auspices."

State Senator H. B. Terrell of West, McLennan County, one of the well-known and able lawmakers of the State, is a candidate for Comptroller of Public Accounts, and is conducting one of the cleanest, most dignified campaigns among all the State candidates. Senator Terrell is also a well-known editor and publisher and owns several newspapers in different parts of the State. He would doubtless be acceptable to the people of Brazos County because of his friendship and loyal support of the A. & M. College. During the troublous times last year when the college was sorely threatened by unfriendly legislation, it had no more active nor earnest defender in the State than the several papers belonging to Senator Terrell. Acts of this kind will not soon be forgotten by the friends of A. & M.

GRATEFUL TO BRYAN.

The people of the A. & M. College are deeply grateful to the people of Bryan for their loyalty to the college during the late commencement exercises and they want the Bryan people to know of their appreciation. In a letter to The Eagle one of the officials of the college says:

"They helped swell the attendance by coming out in large numbers to every event on the program, and were courteous and friendly with the visitors at the college in such a manner as to insure the making of a good impression on all visitors. We feel grateful for the way in which they 'turned out' for the exercises."

"Another thing for which we are very grateful is the excellent car service that was given by the Bryan College Interurban and with the new motor car which was operated on the Houston & Texas Central lines. The cars were run with great frequency, making it easy for a person to come and go between Bryan and the college. We certainly appreciate the efforts of Mr. Gammill and those who are working with him for the efforts which he made to insure good service during those times."

TAX REFORM GROWING.

The growing dissatisfaction with the general property tax in the United States has seldom been more emphatically exhibited than in the tax conference, attended by members of the Middle West and Pacific coast universities and representatives of seventy-five civic and commercial organizations of the Northwest in Seattle. "The skies are weeping today," exclaimed Mayor Gill; "they will weep every day this session, just as they weep every time you talk about taxes."

Years ago they taxed chimneys and windows because they were visible; nowadays the man who has a million dollars escapes, while the poor woman with a visible hen is taxed." As relates to Washington, the conference evoked almost unanimous demand for a tax amendment to the constitution; as regards the Northwest in general, it showed intensity of feeling, for a country of new and relatively simple economic conditions. In Kentucky the same movement toward constitutional reform is espoused by the Courier-Journal, which remarks that "the system has been tried too long, and every successive assessment demonstrates more thoroughly its inefficiency. Outside the cities there is little pretense that property is assessed at its fair cash value, and even in the cities the big end of the burden is borne by the small property owners." The clearest remedies, the classification of property and the centralization and expert management of assessment systems, are gradually gaining ground; but in a matter of such importance to so many millions of people, practice follows theory with painful slowness.—New York Evening Post.

AT THE QUEEN.

A grand list of programs have been arranged for the Queen for the coming week, commencing today with No. 18 of the series of "Our Mutual Girl," featuring the popular Norma Phillips. A fifty little Essanay comedy-drama, featuring the great favorite, handsome Francis X. Bushman, and a strong two-reel Thanhouser drama, with Harry Benham, the Thanhouser Kidlets, Miss Beautiful and Frank Farington in an all-star cast.

Tuesday—There will be one of those famous Keystone comedies, "The Chicken Chaser," featuring the funny comedian, Roscoe Arbuckle, together with a grand Biograph drama, "The Ethics of the Profession," featuring Louise Vale and George Morgan, and a fine two-reel drama, "The Squire's Son," featuring Anna Little and George Osborne.

Wednesday brings the Mutual Weekly, also the funny comedians, Wallie Van and Hughie Mack, in a screaming Vitaphone comedy, "The Widow of Red Rock," together with a grand two-reel Malesic drama, "Texas Bill's Last Ride," featuring Miss Billie West.

Thursday—Anna Schaefer, George Stanley and Myrtle Gonzalez will be seen in a beautiful Biograph drama, "The Power to Forgive." James Cruse, Flo LaBadie and David Thompson will be seen in a grand two-reel Thanhouser drama, "A Debut in the Secret Service," and Mabel Normand (the Biograph diving girl) and Mack Sennett will be featured in another of those screaming Keystone comedies, "Mack at It Again."

Friday—There will be a dandy Western comedy, "A Happy Coercion," by the Flying A Company, featuring Vivian Rich, Jack Richardson and Louise Lester, together with a beautiful drama in two reels, "The Gehala," featuring Romona Ratcliff and Chet Whitney, and a strong Western Selig drama, "Eugenies at the Bar U Ranch," with Lester Cuneo and Chas. Wheelock in the lead.

Saturday brings another of those great masterpieces, "Daughters of Men," a grand Lubin five-reel special, with the Broadway all-star cast. This is another of the famous Charles Klein's famous stage plays which had a most successful run on Broadway of one year. It is one of the big events of the present year in pictures and everyone should make an effort to see it.

NEW BUSINESS BUILDING.

Haswell Corner to Be Rebuilt With Modern Fireproof Structure.

Bryan is to have a new and elegant business building on Main street. The Tyler Haswell corner is to be improved. The building now on the property is to be razed and rebuilt from the ground up. The new building will have a 25-foot frontage on Main street, running back 140 feet, leaving a 10-foot passage next to the H. & T. C. right of way. It will be two stories high, pressed brick and plate glass front, modern awning and fireproof throughout. Mr. Haswell will occupy 115 feet of the lower floor of the building and a part of the second floor. His office will be located on a mezzanine floor in the rear and will be equipped with the most modern furniture and equipment. The 25-foot section of the building next to the railroad not occupied by Mr. Haswell has not been leased as yet.

The plans of the new building will necessitate the moving of the Boyett ice house, which will move back to the old location in the rear of the Lawrence Grocery Company building next to the railroad. The brewery people own a brick building there and this will be remodeled, rearranged and refitted to accommodate Mr. Boyett's large ice and beer business.

Mr. Haswell has occupied the corner where his store is now located for twenty-two years and takes the new building under a long lease. His stock is now being moved to the Dobrovolsky building in the Exchange hotel block, which he will occupy until his new quarters are ready.

The owners of the Haswell corner reside in Tennessee and The Eagle learns they will have a contractor here in a day or two to begin work on the new building, which will be pushed to as early completion as possible.

The Plain of Curragh.
The Curragh (a plain in the County Kildare, Ireland) is a stretch of open ground of about 4,800 acres and serves the twin purposes of a large military camp and a race course, and in the latter capacity it has a reputation extending as far back as the first century A. D., at which period, if records may be accepted, chariot races were a diversion which the people of the time permitted themselves. The camp only dates from the Cromwellian war. The plain of Curragh was often the scene of hostile engagements between early Irish kings, and it is St. Bridget who is credited with having received a grant of the district from the king of Leinster and with having turned it into a common. The young men of Kildare are often jokingly described as "the boys of the short grass" in allusion to the herbage of the district of Curragh.—Westminster Gazette.

One of the Weather Men.
Shortly after the establishment of a station in Wytheville by the weather bureau a youth named Tom erected a signal pole on his mother's coal shed. He would daily boast flags of his own in imitation of the ones of the government. This was done so persistently that Mary, a neighbor's daughter, soon adjusted her movements for the day to Tom's Gaze.

On the morning for a picnic she was rejoiced at the sight of a fair weather flag flying from Tom's flagpole. Her mother, being discouraged by the number of clouds, remarked, "You cannot depend on his flag, for he may not have followed the weather man's." Mary, thinking them thoroughly reliable, said, "You can depend on them, mother, for Tom does his own guessing!"—National Monthly.

Foiled the Culprit.
Dr. Kennedy, a former head master of Shrewsbury school, has a keen sense of humor. One year, on April 1, an audacious schoolboy put the school clock forward, and the chapel bell was rung an hour too soon. The culprit duly received the alarming order to come to the head master's room a little before noon.

Preparations were made for the usual form of punishment. The cane whizzed in the air, but, bracing his nerves to meet its descent the victim found himself untouched. A second time he heard it swung with sound and fury, yet it signified nothing. The boy was still trembling for the third stroke when he heard the master's voice: "Go away, you April fool!"—London Answers.

Queer Old Book Titles.
These are some of the odd titles of old English books published in the time of Cromwell:
"A Most Delectable Sweet Perfumed Nosenagay For God's Saints to Smell At."
"Biscuit Baked In the Oven of Charity, carefully conserved for the Chickens of the Church, the Sparrows of the Spirit and the Sweet Swallows of Salvation."
"A Sigh of Sorrow For the Sinners of Zion breathed out of a Hole in the Wall of an Earthly Vessel known Among Men by the name of Samuel Fish."
"Eggs of Charity Laid For the Chickens of the Covenant and Baked with the Water of Divine Love. Take ye out and Eat."
"The 'Spiritual Mustard Pot to make the Soul Sneeze with Devotion.'"

Taking a Mean Advantage.
Once a thrifty Scotch physician was called to a case where a woman had dislocated her jaw. He very soon put her right. The woman asked how much was to pay. The doctor named his fee. The patient thought it too much. He, however, would not take less, and as the woman refused to give him the fee he began to yawn. Yawning, as every one knows, is infectious. The young woman in turn yawned. Her jaw again went out of joint, and the doctor triumphantly said, "Now, until you hand me over my fee your jaw can remain as it is." Needless to say, the money was promptly paid.
